Emeka A. Akamike to Speak at West Sacramento Library January 16

(Woodland, CA) – As part of the Yolo County Library Local Author Series, author, scientist and healthcare advocate Emeka A. Akamike will be speak at the Arthur F. Turner Community Library branch at 1212 Merkley Avenue in West Sacramento on January 16, 5:00 to 6:30 p.m. Admission is free.

Mr. Akamike is the author of two medial novels based on a lifetime of work as a research scientist in the areas of industrial chemistry and medicinal chemistry. The January 16 event will feature a discussion of his most recent novel, Soft Tissue, along with current works in progress. In addition, there will be a presentation on the topics of breast cancer, stroke and immune system responses.

“The Yolo County Library is pleased to be able to offer this series,” said Yolo County Librarian Patty Wong.” “It is especially important as local authors provide inspiration for the writing process as well as enrich our community, mind, body and spirit. The library offers a unique place for everyone to participate in diverse and creative learning opportunities.”

This program is sponsored by the Yolo County Library, Arthur F. Turner Community Library and the West Sacramento Friends of the Library.
