Yolo County 101 Resident's Academy Returns

(Woodland, CA) – Starting February 16, the Yolo County 101 Resident's Academy seminar series is again being offered to provide residents insight into the form and function of Yolo County government and its programs and services. This informative series of eight free seminars will begin February 16 with closing ceremonies in April 2011. The first seminar will be held at 5:30 p.m. in the Erwin W. Meier Administration Building located at 625 Court Street in Woodland. All county residents are encouraged to participate.

During Yolo County 101 sessions, participants will learn more about their county representatives and what they do, along with the 'ins and outs' of local government processes. Subject areas will include: the Board of Supervisors, county administration, elections, land use, agriculture, public safety, the legal system, fiscal responsibilities, social services, water and flood control issues, tribal relations, public health, emergency services, and special districts and boards.

"Past participants have noted that this is a great opportunity to ask direct questions of our top managers in county government," said Yolo County Board of Supervisors Chair Matt Rexroad. "We are pleased to continue this program for this very purpose and to share with our residents the breadth of Yolo County's programs and services."

"This program, which has been well received, was created several years ago by Supervisor Rexroad," said Yolo County Human Resources Director Mindi Nunes. "It has been a valuable tool for both our residents and our employees who want to learn more about county government."

All sessions are free, but registration is required to reserve a seat. To register, visit: www.yolocounty.org (go to: Resident's Academy), or call Yolo County Human Resources (530) 666-8044 to request a registration form be sent to you by mail. Registration forms are due by February 7.
