Beginner's Composting Class January 16

(Woodland, CA) – Is learning how to “go green” on your list of resolutions for 2016? Then come to the Hanna & Herbert Bauer Memorial Community Garden in Woodland on Saturday, January 16, from 10:00 to 11:30 a.m., for a free composting class sponsored by the Yolo County Health & Human Services Agency Community Health Branch.

Composting is a great way to utilize green materials from your yard or garden and can enhance the success of your plants or crops. This class will teach the basic skills and techniques used in “hot” composting, provide an introduction to the benefits of composting for plant nutrition, and detail how to use compost to improve your soil. This is a hands-on class so be willing to roll up your sleeves and get some experience in the process. Gloves and shoes that can get dirty are recommended.

The class is free to all, and is taught by garden assistant and expert, David Linebarger. Pre-registration is required. To register, contact Robin Rocksvold at (530) 666-8528 or robin.rocksvold@yolocounty.org.

In the event of heavy rain, the class will be cancelled.
