Yolo Judge Gives Probation to Woman Who Helped Her Mother's Killer

Woodland, CA – October 10, 2008 – Yolo County Superior Court Judge David Rosenberg granted probation today to Amy Hudson, convicted of felony accessory to the murder of her mother. Amy Hudson admitted to investigators that she helped hide the murder weapon and the killer's clothing after the bludgeoning death of her mother in Woodland in 2005. Judge Rosenberg stated that he decided to give probation in part because the defendant did this during a particularly traumatic and stressful time of her life and that since the crime, while the defendant has been out on bail, she has been going to school and working.

Both the District Attorney's Office and the Yolo County Probation Office were recommending a state prison sentence
